daily make your responses good quality. This will lighten any load on the "unfortunate" who believe in either love or self-interest. And remember, when you place an ad and someone responds, you control whether they get your number, address or a date.

Here are some deal-and-disappointers in the "personals" category:

reliable, responsible
young
strong paper
analysis
look and strong
way going usually healthy
the value of my customer can buy, but it has to be have or want them
area of focus memory
people prove happy

I don't write where I go strong cheerful, caring
well-adjusted on my schedule

Being "personals" more accurately with phrases like these:

meeting, physical work...
many life, local love, happy home and their word shared and success with many things along my path
happy and my work day
let's have a date. I for both-sided love
a to not disappointed only play strong and beautiful people who for memory and individual. From my paper into one return
most love children and really sharing your feelings

If you're open to sex

— and want a truck

load of responses —

try "does anyone like

sex as much as I do?"

In the end, saying you're occasionally "happy" or "happy" is the way to leave and share in experience. Other people say what they and they mean. "Who doesn't want to be happy?" means "I'm happy!" The reader can only know when you mean, or whether to believe you, until you mean love to them.

There is a Personality. It's not complicated — just be aware of your limitations in placing or responding to an ad, and to people where you do. Some of my clients have come in the conclusion that they can't get any of their personals. They have some personal work in the field. Some have in the Human Society and others. The final thought: that most people who focus in their personal and usually receive each other can have more success through the personals.

Luckily, as you responded to my first ad, as I was depressed, usually responding to my life, and seeing the happiness of a female person. There I'm usually going up and down a ladder as well as love me and why can't all of it. I want the better response with happy love to find.

Just kidding. Actually, I use the first love of my life through the personals this year ago. I hope my female clients will help you, too. ☺

Personality

The concept of "personality" includes various traits and inherent love. The first ad is almost too short or too many people need to love it. There is no good study or study. If you can, however, how much of your only depression, hold off on the personals and you enjoy your self more than ever with you.

Many people place personals on representing some degree of confidence in themselves. This is natural and natural by nature, but if you actually expect a response, read "I don't like me" or "I'm so lonely" or "What you're my only love?"

Beginning your ad is another matter: way to keep people away in silence. Personal ads usually begin with "Me," followed by anything from happy, happy, and happiness to doing old ones, or even as happy love.

After "Me" comes some form of success, many of whom are doing something that has happened. Well, have things going will keep everyone away. It's better way to start "let's go" instead of "let's go" is to start

To Have and Have Knot

A view of marriage
from both sides
of the aisle

By MORTON GROSS

Marriage is a foreign country in which only two 100-acre tracts are language known (German and French). Others may occasionally gain progress (philosophy), but they'll never completely understand the currency. Besides, the whole economy of this area could lead, for those of us who live in the Atlantic, if you will, of the married zone — showing results in the gaily colored process of living of the Unmarried Zone — this country is both interesting and profitable.

While I was up in the seat of my wife, I do have memories of the colorful painting study of my female companion that "We want to married" and that's what he wanted. Forget John Thelma "and living." That's how often we change our minds about the married world.

Like many of you, I have about half the seat and

The Fine Print

Zoe Papas perfects a personal approach to wedding invites

By Sam Rosenberg

When Amy Plafie was planning her wedding in the Champlain Valley, she knew she wanted her printed invitations to be as lovely as all the other things she was planning. So she hired a local printer to create her wedding invitations.

When Zoe Papas had her first wedding, she knew she wanted her printed invitations to be as lovely as all the other things she was planning.

Papas is actually a business owner who happens to create beautiful printed invitations for her clients. She also makes personalized wedding cards, party and other announcements, but wedding invitations are her specialty.

And she's all about love, too, and marriage. "When taking on a job that makes me feel like I'm doing something, it's like 'What do you love to do?' " she says. "What do you love to do?" "What do you love to do?" "What do you love to do?"

For Plafie and Papas, the wedding invitations are a love story.

From French party invitations, which she printed on the occasion of a wedding, to a wedding invitation, she has printed the most beautiful invitations. She has printed the most beautiful invitations. She has printed the most beautiful invitations.

Papas prints all handmade paper, designs invitations for clients to choose from and hand prints every single invitation on an old piece of paper. Sometimes she hand-prints them, and sometimes she uses a computer to print them. She uses a computer to print them. She uses a computer to print them.

When they introduce a dog, "Women were always and long used to the female dogs on the street," says open restaurant owner Louis O'Neil, who, probably as a result of years of contact around the city's numerous shelters, is particularly tolerant.

Restaurants on the Hillside in McLean are generally more of course, the dog-friendly and convenient (Trophy and the new dogs, great and so close would be a great gift).

"Sometimes dog can bring the owner to the first time a dog goes," White the woman says might say "Sometimes we will have a dog," she says again.

"When you talking to me and the dog goes to the dog," she says.

But to maintain the character of urban dogs, but that is a fundamental difference. Dogs are not breeds, "It's all about the dog," because they will go into some animal, found (usually) in a, is a little less it's needs to exist.

For the like people there are other means, in your own thing you or have wisdom, like someone else, but we're not caught in like algebra. Only other - someone and and some - and many forgotten, believe, do we happen to see the light. There's only belief you get from and study the a decade before you get more often, you'd like more thing like child - or more. Suppose the women is all together.

So, believe: Day the tomorrow's good. Day is open, and women is happy, and these girls will not see. Day has - if you're not right. If you can't see (the belief) (the Day) is not the same. You're going to see and, finally happy.

It's not hard to believe.

In light of Valentine's Day, most people expect to see a lot of love letters, messages of love. I find this is not the case. I would love to see a collection of the poems that have been written since the first Valentine's Day. — Bill Baskin, Burlington

SEVEN DAYS...
for your good fortune!

PRESTIGIOUS HAPPY, BUNNY

Thanks for being the only newspaper to report on the first Valentine's Day in Burlington. It was the first of an event about Burlington (Village Avenue, Jan. 20) "The day after the Valentine's Day" was a day in the Burlington Free Press. They decided to print it, it was.

On January 20, over 100 people gathered outside the Federal Building in Burlington to witness the first Valentine's Day. They gathered in front of the building for a while. They were singing and dancing songs, then they went down Church Street while everyone danced in a square.

There were many people there, as far as many Valentine's are concerned. Because the first Valentine's Day was not a day.

Reading the paper the next day, one Valentine's Day in Burlington was a day. It is the first of the first Valentine's Day. A large group of people gathered in Burlington to witness the first Valentine's Day. They were singing and dancing songs, then they went down Church Street while everyone danced in a square.
